

Visa for language acquisition

Would you like to learn German in Germany? Find out how to get a visa for language acquisition.

You can take German language courses not only abroad, but also in Germany. A visa for language acquisition under Section 16f \(1\) of the Residence Act \(AufenthG\)  permits entry and residence for this purpose.

To find out if you need a visa to enter Germany, please refer to the “How do I apply for a visa?” section.

What are the requirements for a language course visa?

- You have been admitted to an intensive German language course. Courses consisting of daily German lessons with a minimum of 18 lessons of instruction per week are generally considered to be intensive language courses. Evening and weekend courses are not sufficient.
- You are able to cover your living costs for the duration of your stay. Evidence can be provided by means of a blocked bank account or a declaration of commitment.

The right visa for your German course

If you want to take a German course in preparation for studying or training in Germany, it may be the case that you do not need a German language course visa, but a visa to start studying or vocational training, especially if you have already found a vocational training place or course of study. If you do not meet the language requirements for enrolment in higher education and have not yet been accepted to a university, you will need a visa for seeking a place in higher education.

Do you meet the requirements mentioned before? Then find out about how the entry and visa process works.

The visa or residence permit for language acquisition is issued for the duration of the language course, up to a maximum of 12 months. During this time, you are permitted to work up to 20 hours per week.
